

Transportation

Seminar Series

Fall 2009

Sponsored by the Center for Transportation Studies

Creating a City of Cyclists: What We Can Learn from Copenhagen

Niels Jensen, City of Copenhagen Traffic and Road Department

Copenhagen is world-renowned as a bicycle-friendly city. Since the 1980s, Copenhagen has been encouraging people to bicycle through an ambitious program that includes expanding the city's bicycle network, building new cycle routes, and improving safety and security. Niels Jensen will highlight how the city has achieved high levels bicycling through its policies, actions and funding.

Jensen has been actively involved in Copenhagen's cycling renaissance for the past couple of decades. He has published articles and made presentations on topics such as cycle tracks, bicycle parking, and green wave corridors.

Friday, Oct 2 2009

12:00 – 1:00pm

Urban Center, Room 204, Portland State University

Check www.cts.pdx.edu/seminars for full schedule

Seminars are free and open to the public

